Nothing was more certain than that the Boston Red Sox would win the World Series. The team's momentum was unstoppable, and the Cardinals were no match for them. The Sox swept the Cardinals with a 3-0 win for their first Series victory since 1918.

The Sox's victory was a historic moment for the franchise, and for the city of Boston. The team had overcome a long drought of championship titles, and their success was celebrated by fans everywhere. The Cardinals, on the other hand, were left in disbelief and disappointment.

The Sox's victory was a testament to their skill and teamwork. They had played with heart and determination throughout the season, and their triumph was a well-deserved reward. The Cardinals, however, had not performed as well as they had hoped, and their loss was a bitter pill to swallow.
